

Andare was a court jester.
He lived happily with his wife and son
in their own little house
quite close to the king's palace.
His wife kept the house clean and beautiful.

At one end of the compound was a well
that gave them water to drink and bathe.

(c) Sumitha Publishers

(c) Sumitha Publishers

Andare's wife was proud because her husband was working in the king's palace.

The king and the queen loved him very much for he made them laugh and kept them happy all the time

(c) Sumitha Publishers

But she was hurt when Andare took her to the palace and made her shout at the queen because she was told that the queen was deaf. All at the palace had laughed at Andare's wife and she felt very hurt and humiliated.

(c) Sumitha Publishers