

“I am not burning them. I am cleaning them” answered the blacksmith.

“When the iron gets melted, the dirt and the rotten pieces get separated. Then I can get good and clean iron. I hammer them and make the things people need. Then I can sell them for a good price” he explained.

The villager watched for a while, took his bundle of wool and went on his way.

(C) Sumitha Publishers

