Andare was the king’s court jester, but he did not live in the palace.

He came to the palace everyday to keep the king, the queen and everybody else in the palace happy.

No one got angry with him for whatever he said or did.
He lived with his wife and son in a little house close to that of a rich man.

The rich man lived in a big house, and his backyard was full of many big trees.

One of these trees was a goraka tree.

Goraka is a tree that bears fruits which become red when they are ripe.

The kernel of the goraka fruit is added to curries to make it tasty.